It was a pleasure to accompany ten Grade 9 and Grade 10 students, venturing beyond the urban hustle of MTR trains to a serene, isolated forest. Their destination was KVIS, a notable school located about two hours from the city in Thailand's Silicon Valley, where they embraced the local culture and school life.

At KVIS, students enjoyed their stay in the Slytherin dorms while participating in various classes, including Thai language, dance, and sociology, all alongside their Thai peers. They engaged in activities like badminton and savoured meals at the impressive buffet canteen, enriching their experience of dorm life.

The journey also included visits to local farms, where students learned about farm-to-table agriculture. At a cocoa farm, they indulged in homemade chocolate fondue and fresh mocha drinks. Meanwhile, a visit to a vegetable farm allowed them to plant their own crops, but the local farm cat stole everyone's hearts and attention.

In addition to these activities, students explored the culinary landscape of Thailand by tasting a variety of authentic dishes and visiting local markets for snacks. This immersive experience not only deepened their understanding of Thai culture but also highlighted the importance of environmental integration in logistical and economic contexts. Overall, the trip offered a rich blend of educational and cultural experiences.
